THE KEY TO CONFIDENCE: DECONSUMPTION - DO CONSUMERS REALLY WANT TO BUY LESS?

Trish Martin, Consultant - OEKO-TEX
Consumers are thinking more and more about the impact their apparel and home textile purchases have on the environment and factory workers. Deconsumption, or consciously buying less, is a practical strategy for reducing impact. But do people really want to buy fewer clothes and home textiles or do they really want to buy smarter? How can manufacturers best help their consumers feel good about the purchases they make?
